Bullet found in man's ashes saves another from jail !

New Delhi: A bullet killed a man, but recovery of a bullet from the ashes after cremation of the deceased saved another from serving a life term in prison. The Supreme Court acquitted one Wasif Haider of murder charge after finding glaring discrepancies in the police story about the bullet. The police charge sheet against Haider had relied on the postmortem report which said there were two bullet wounds on the body, one caused by entry of the bullet and the other by its exit.

However, when the body was cremated, a bullet was recovered from the ashes, casting serious doubt on the police theory. A bench of Justices N V Ramana and Mohan

M Shantanagoudar said, "It is surprising that the post-mortem report describes that there were two wounds in the body of the deceased, one being the entry and the other being the exit wound. Allegedly bullet was still recovered from the ashes of the deceased.

"The forensic laboratory report shows that this bullet was charred and blistered. This recovery of bullet from the ashes of the deceased is irreconcilable with the post mortem report which states an exit wound, implying that the bullet had left the body. The aforesaid fact raises a suspicion on both the post-mortem report and the forensic laboratory report as they are incompatible with each other." The SC said the bullet that was recovered from the ashes could not be proved to have been fired from the pistol allegedly recovered from Haider: "Even the recovery of the pistol is doubtful. While prosecution case reveals that one bore Colt pistol was recovered from the possession of the accused Haider, evidence of the police officer Rajendra Dhar Dwivedi reveals that a 32 bore Colt pistol was recovered pursuant to his arrest. In addition, the police also contradicted itself by claiming that two pistols of bore were recovered from Haider," said Justice Ramana, who wrote the judgement for the bench. Referring to the police investigation into the case of communal rioting in Kanpur on March 16, 2001, in which the person was killed, the SC said it was surprising that the police took 55 days to conduct test identification parade of accused persons by eye-witnesses, who appeared to be tutored. The trial court had convicted Haider of murder and sentenced him to life imprisonment. But Allahabad HC acquitted him, which was challenged in the SC by the state government.

For heart patients, movement is key

Heart patients are being advised to move around every 20 minutes in a bid to prolong life following a study presented at the Canadian Cardiovascular Congress (CCC) 2018. Heart patients spend most of their waking hours sitting, lying down and watching television. Previous research has shown that being sedentary for long periods could shorten life but taking breaks to move around may counteract the risk, particularly if it means burning more than 770 kcal a day. The study also found that heart patients should interrupt sedentary time every 20 minutes with a seven minutes bouts of light physical activity. Simple activities such as standing up and walking at a causal pace would expend more than 770 kcal in a day if done with this frequency and duration. The study enrolled 132 patients with coronary artery disease.

The average age was 63 years and 77 % were male. Participants wore an armband activity monitor for an average of 22 hours a day for five days. The activity monitor recorded the amount of emergy spend during breaks from inactivity, the amount inactivity time, and the number and duration of breaks during each sedentary hour.
